

NARRATOR 2: Down came the driver, the gambler and the lady, who promptly fainted at the sight of those ornery bandits. Then, ever so slowly, the two dance hall girls stepped out of the stagecoach with a giggle.

NARRATOR 3: The two bandits turned to look at the pretty dance hall girls.

Narrator 1: Meanwhile, while the bandits turned their heads, the guard knocked them out and captured both of them. The stagecoach was saved!

ALL: The moral to our story is this:

Guards: We must save the Payroll? (questioning)

Gambler: Raise you five, my friend? (questioning)

Dance Hall Girls: Actually, fellas, you're all wrong! The moral to this story is to keep your mind on your business!

Lady: Oh, my heavens!

ALL: THE END!